'Reading it on the train I had to fight not to sob in public . . . Langdale is a wonderful writer' (Daily Mail on Away from You) Perfect for readers of Adele Parks and Maggie O'Farrell. Minnie and her sister Clara, spinsters both, live in a dilapidated country house in the middle of a housing estate, built when their father sold off the family's land. Now in their seventies, their days follow a well-established routine: long gone are the garden parties, the tennis lessons and their suffocatingly strict mother. Gone, too, is any mention of what happened when Minnie was sixteen, and the secret the family buried in the grounds of their estate. Directly opposite them lives Max, an 11-year-old whose life with his mum has changed beyond recognition since her new boyfriend arrived.

Cast aside, he takes solace in Minnie's careful routine, observed through his bedroom window. Over the course of the summer, both begin to tell their stories: Max through a Dictaphone, Minnie through a diary. As their tales intertwine, ghosts are put to rest and challenges faced, in a story that is as dark as it is uplifting.

Recently orphaned and facing starvation, seventeen-year-old Maty needs to get herself sorted before winter arrives. As the days shorten, so do her odds of survival. When an unexpected opportunity comes along in the form of a beguiling stranger, she sees more than just an escape from misery; she sees a chance at a better life. Alone but undeterred, she ventures west. It is a journey of far-reaching consequences, where law has no footing, and where every decision she makes must be weighed against the prospect of death. Set in the uncompromising American West of the 1870s, Nolan Cordovano's fourth novel is a tale of romantic aspirations pursued through fateful decisions, told in prose as harrowing as it is seductive.
