Approaches To Teaching Writing

The shared writing approach enables teachers to help students develop more complex ideas and language and to foster their critical awareness as writers. It provides an excellent setting for introducing or reinforcing information about specific text forms, including the transactional text forms that students will increasingly encounter in social studies, science, mathematics, and other curriculum areas.

The process approach to writing consists of four stages (Badger & White, 2000): 1. pre-writing 2. drafting 3. revising 4. editing. The main purpose of the pre-writing stage is to provide opportunities for learners to brainstorm ideas on and read around an essay topic.
