Gift For Cane Corso Mom Dad Lover Journal Notebook

This Notebook makes a grat present for Christmas and birthdays.

Traditionally the Cane Corso was used to hunt and catch large prey such as boar, deer and bears as well as used by farmers to guard cattle. The breed was quickly employed as night watchdogs, keepers and bodyguards due to their high levels of intelligence, trainability and loyalty. In modern times the breed is mainly kept as a domesticated companion dog but also is still used for its original farming purposes. The Cane Corso has a similar appearance to the Italian Molosser, but has a much large build. The Cane Corso is muscly but is less bulky than other breeds within the Mastiff typing. It is important to note that the Cane Corso is not a breed recommended for novice dog owners! As previously mentioned the Cane Corso is both loyal, trainable and intelligent but it is also incredibly head strong. A Cane Corso puppy needs strong leadership and consistent training to ensure that it is a well behaved dog. It is also important to socialize your Cane Corso at an early age to encourage a more relaxed nature. Although not an aggressive breed, the Cane Corso is known to become highly protective over their family unit during serious threats.

Also known as the Italian Mastiff, the Cane Corso is a large dog with a lot of love and affection for the family. However, they are also one of the best guard dog breeds. Like other guard dogs, their appearance is part of what makes the Cane Corso so intimidating. Its regal appearance hides the fact that this is a breed that can be incredibly playful. They are also loath to be away from their family. There is no doubt that they make great guardians, but proper training and socialization makes them a perfect family dog that can go with you anywhere - which will make everyone happy. Cane Corsos can be great guardians, but the vast majority of the time, they are goofy pups that consider themselves lap dogs - you need to let them know that isn't the case early if you don't want a 110-pound dog trying to claim your lap. Unlike other mastiffs, the Cane Corso is easy to train as they are real people pleasers. They are not a good breed if you have not had a dog before or if you don't have time for regular training and exercise. However, you really could not ask for a better breed when it comes to protection, playing, and affection.

Cane Corso: It sounds like the name of a cop on a primetime television show, but it's actually an Italian dog with a large, muscular body. This dog is pretty large, and many people know very little about this animal. He's a very elegant and distinguished dog, and he possesses many qualities that make him an excellent pet, despite his large size and intimidating appearance. Many people are unaware that this is a dog that resembles a mastiff, which is a very large animal. It's one of the largest breeds of dog, and the cane corso is not far behind the mastiff in terms of size. These are dogs that were developed and bred in Italy, which is what gives them their Italian heritage.They were first bred because warriors needed dogs on their side, and the size of these animals was very impressive to them. From that point on, they were bred as hunting dogs that were used to corner and chase larger wild animals when hunters needed to attract them. The cane corso is often described as a working dog that is happy in the cattle field doing the job it was trained to do over the past few centuries. Over time, these dogs were less a piece of battle and more a piece of companionship for those who resided in European countries. They've very personable, and often used as guard dogs because of their size and mean look. This guide book will show and teach you more about this particular breed as you read along.

The Cane Corso is a breed of companion, hunting, catch and guard dog from Italy. The breed's name translates from the Italian words Cane, meaning

'dog, and Corso, meaning 'courtyard or guard.' The breed is also commonly referred to as the 'Italian Mastiff' and the 'Italian Corso.' The Cane Corso is a distant descendant of the Canis Pugnax, which was a breed used by the Romans as attack dogs during war time. Traditionally the Cane Corso was used to hunt and catch large prey such as boar, deer and bears as well as used by farmers to guard cattle. The breed was quickly employed as night watchdogs, keepers and bodyguards due to their high levels of intelligence, trainability and loyalty. In modern times the breed is mainly kept as a domesticated companion dog but also is still used for its original farming purposes. The Cane Corso has a similar appearance to the Italian Molosser, but has a much larger build. The Cane Corso is muscular but is less bulky than other breeds within the Mastiff typing. It is important to note that the Cane Corso is not a breed recommended for novice dog owners! As previously mentioned the Cane Corso is both loyal, trainable and intelligent but it is also incredibly head strong. A Cane Corso puppy needs strong leadership and consistent training to ensure that it is a well behaved dog. It is also important to socialize your Cane Corso at an early age to encourage a more relaxed nature. Although not an aggressive breed, the Cane Corso is known to become highly protective over their family unit during serious threats. Before purchasing any pet it is important to understand that as a pet owner you are responsible for the care and wellbeing of your pet. It is important to try and learn as much as you can about the animal you are considering to keep as a pet to make sure that your lifestyle, household and financial status are suited to provide your pet with the best possible care. This guide has been designed to provide you with both precise and concise information about a Cane Corso's basic needs to help you provide your pet with the best quality care practices. When it comes to athleticism, agility, speed, energy level, and sense of adventure, the Cane Corso (CAH-nay COR-so) easily outdoes the other mastiff breeds. This robust dog needs his share of exercise, but above all he requires personal interaction and lots of companionship. He lives for his family and may become destructive if left alone too much. Cane Corso puppies should be friendly and trusting with strangers. With proper socialization, they become more aloof and discerning as they mature. As with all mastiffs, socialization is an absolute requirement to promote the correct temperament, which should be protective in a calm and discriminating way. Unfortunately, an awful lot of people are breeding or raising these dogs in irresponsible ways and the result is an awful lot of Cane Corsos with unstable or aggressive temperaments that can be dangerous to innocent people. Though the Cane Corso was not used for dog-fighting, dog aggression (often very serious) can still be a problem. He should be thoroughly socialized with other dogs from an early age. I wouldn't keep a Cane Corso with another large dog of the same sex. The Cane Corso is more attentive to his owner and more responsive to training than other mastiffs. Though quite dominant and strong-willed, he will respect an owner who is confident and consistent. Cane Corsos have tighter skin than other mastiffs and drool less. Some love to dig holes, and most enjoy splashing in water, whether it be a pond or a mudhole, the lawn sprinkler or their water bowl. These are not dainty dogs for fastidious housekeepers! The Cane Corso (pronounced "KAH-Nay KO-R-So") is a large-boned and muscular working dog with a noble and confident disposition. Cane Corso are powerful dogs that may seem intimidating to some. These fearless and vigilant dogs are not right for everyone. However, they are often misunderstood and can actually make excellent companions. For those who like the idea of a very large dog that is protective and athletic, the Cane Corso is one to consider.
