Wow - I love this book - as I did the previous two books in the trilogy (Dark Eden and Mother of Eden). As a whole, the three books (which need to be read in order) create a stunning picture of life on the alien plant of Eden, where a human community has grown up over a few centuries from two stranded astronauts.

Angie Redlantern is the first to spot the boats—five abreast with men in metal masks and spears standing proud, ready for the fight to come. As the people of New Earth declare war on the people of Mainground, a dangerous era has dawned for Eden. After generations of division and disagreement, the two populations of Eden have finally broken their tentative peace, giving way to bloodshed and ...

Daughter of Eden was highly anticipated, at least in my book :) After the fascinating Dark Eden and its worthy heiress Mother of Eden, I wondered what had Beckett planned for the finale. I barely read the blurb before picking up the book, but that didn't hinder me. If anything, Daughter of Eden is a book that reads in one go.

The Eden trilogy is a brilliant piece of imaginative storytelling and Daughter of Eden closes the circle in the best possible way, by leaving just enough of a gap to allow our imaginations to stay on that beautiful dark world to wonder what happens next.

With this gritty tale of human expansion, Beckett brings his acclaimed Eden series (Dark Eden, Mother of Eden) to a striking conclusion. Eden's tribal people are descended from a tiny group of human settlers who came to the planet some 300 years ago. They live low-tech, subsistence lives, overshadowed by their history.
