Some of us think of it as a "lost art." Isaacs obviously has both words clearly in mind as he introduces his "pioneering approach." His purpose is to explain HOW effective dialogue, dialogue which is "about a shared inquiry, a way of thinking and reflecting together", can increase and enhance human dignity and understanding.

Dialogue is the art of thinking together. There are no winners or losers. In that sense it is the opposite of debate. In other words: A dialogue is a conversation with a centre, not with sides. A dialogue does not solve problems, it dissolves problems. Taking it a step further, dialogue is about exploring the nature of choice.

Dialogue is conversation that encourages collective observation and thought, enabling groups to think beyond their members' individual limitations. Isaacs posits an "ecology of thought," which is typically constrained by habits that are known and felt but never discussed.

So dialogue can be seen as the practice of Thinking Together: finding and creating perspectives, meanings, and possibilities by gathering together ideas and their relationships from the flow of a group conversation.

But dialogue is an altogether very different way of talking together. Generally, we think of dialogue as "better conversation." But there is much more to it. Dialogue, as I define it, is a conversation with a center, not sides. It is a way of taking the energy of our differences and channeling it toward something that has never been created before.

Dialogue: The Art of Thinking Together (William Isaacs) The capacity for talking together constituted the foundation for democracy, far more fundamental than voting. As one ancient Greek philosopher noted, "When voting started, democracy ended."

Dialogue is an interchange of ideas and a search for understanding of ourselves and of one other. It is all about polishing communication techniques that open doors to everyone's ideas. It is all about togetherness and truth; it not about self-rightousness or command.

The programme uses a variety of learning methods including short presentations, large group dialogues, small group reflection, reading, video and journaling. There is an orientation call prior to the program and a one-hour coaching call with a member of the faculty after the program to maximize your learning.
