A fairy (also fata, fay, fey, fae, fair folk; from faery, faerie, "realm of the fays") is a type of mythical being or legendary creature in European folklore (and particularly Celtic, Slavic, German, English, and French folklore), a form of spirit, often described as metaphysical, supernatural, or preternatural.

Elf - Wikipedia

Tolkien was certainly aware of the existence of these traditional types of fairies when he wrote The Lord of the Rings. Tolkien's elves, his main representatives of fairy in Middle-Earth, combine aspects from many of the different kinds of fairies that C.S. Lewis mentions, but simultaneously reject others and this structuring is important for the comparison between Men and Elves.

Even the most fantastic myths, legends and fairy tales differ from modern fantasy genre in three respects: Modern genre fantasy postulates a different reality, either a fantasy world separated from ours, or a hidden fantasy side of our own world. In addition, the rules, geography, history, etc. of this world tend to be defined, even if they are not described outright.
