FLORENCE AND BAGHDAD: RENAISSANCE ART AND ARABIC SCIENCE Hans Belting Cambridge, MA: Belknap, 2011 (303 pages, notes, index, illustrations) $39.95 (cloth) The key role of Islamic culture and science in the history of the European Renaissance has long been known, yet scholarship of the Renaissance typically glosses over this intertwined history ...

"Florence and Baghdad: Renaissance Art and Arabic Science ...

In Florence and Baghdad: Renaissance Art and Arab Science, Belting makes a compelling case that the vision of the Renaissance—a vision that still holds us today—began not in Florence, but in Baghdad, with important implications for both cultures...Reproducing the complexity of Belting's argument here seems like "playing God," too, in capturing the majesty of his examples and endless connections (all wonderfully translated from the original German by Deborah Lucas Schneider).

Florence and Baghdad : Renaissance art and Arab science. [Hans Belting] -- In this lavishly illustrated study, Belting deals with the double history of perspective, as a visual theory based on geometrical abstraction (in the Middle East) and as pictorial theory (in Europe). ...

We've just released Florence and Baghdad: Renaissance Art and Arab Science, a new book from the German art historian Hans Belting. The book's title stresses conjunction, but it also clearly highlights things we're perhaps more accustomed to seeing considered in opposition.

The theory of perspective, which allowed Florentine artists to depict the world from a spectator's point of view, originated in Baghdad with an eleventh-century mathematician. Using the metaphor of the mutual gaze, Belting narrates the encounter between science and art, Arab Baghdad and Renaissance Florence, that revolutionized Western culture.
