-Cell surface receptors receive the signal (e.g. a messenger sub-stance) at the outside of the cell, become activated and initiate a signaling chain in the interior of the cell. In such signaling path-ways, the membrane-bound receptor transduces the signal at the cell membrane so that it is not necessary for the signal to actually enter the cell.

Ralph A. Bradshaw, Edward A. Dennis, in Handbook of Cell Signaling (Second Edition), 2010 Cell signaling , which is also often referred to as signal transduction or transmembrane signaling, is the process by which cells communicate with their environment and respond temporally to external cues that they sense there. Handbook of Cell Signaling eBook by - 9780080920917 ...

The EPOR is a member of the cytokine receptor superfamily, which includes receptors for other long-chain cytokines, such as growth hormone (GH), thrombopoietin (TPO), and granulocyte cell signaling factor (GCSF), as well as short-chain cytokines, such as interleukins (ILs) 2, 3, and 4.

The book is a good survey of cell signaling pathways in development and disease. It is marred by poor editing in parts despite the fact it is the Third Edition and the publisher is Oxford University Press after all. The graphics help save the day and they are both instructive and illucidative.
