In Addis Ababa, leases are acquired by auction, though some prime business land is available at set prices. Detractors say the inability to buy land outright, the high cost of leasing land, the requirement to pay 50% up front, and problems and delays in executing the lease and infrastructure agreements deter investment, both foreign and domestic.

Land in Ethiopia is the property of the public and can generally be acquired only on the basis of a lease. Private ownership of land is prohibited. In many residential urban areas, there are freehold plots owned by private individuals outside of the lease system, but even for these plots of land, the owners technically own only the buildings on the land and not the land itself (which remains public property).

The lease regulation of the city of Addis Ababa and other regions clearly show that urban dwellers may get a fixed land for residential houses free of charge. This is one character this lease legal framework shares with the proc. 47/1975.
