Summary 'A serious and notable contribution to racial understanding' - Saturday Review of Literature Standing. Bear's dismay at the condition of his people, when after sixteen years' absence he returned to the Pine Ridge Sioux Reservation, may well have served as a catalyst for the writing of this book, first published in 1933.

Land of the Spotted Eagle", published in 1933, is an ethnographic description of traditional Lakota life and customs, criticizing whites' efforts to "make over" the Indian into the likeness of the white race. Here, Standing Bear observed, "White men seem to have difficulty realizing that people who live differently from themselves still might be traveling the upward and progressive road of life."
