Over-compensating for the lack of sight, this child learned to cook, thread her own needle, sew, cook, play the piano and the pipe organ professionally (anything with a melody), light a gas stove with a match, set and start a coal stove, crochet, knit and tat, and raise a family. She smelled her way through the spices for a good cake and made muffins and bread as tasty as the baker at your favorite bakery. She didn't see with her eyes but she saw with her fingers, her ears, nose and if all else failed, her taste buds. This wonderful story will make everyone appreciate more fully their own gifts and abilities.

Annabel Gresham was about to be done out of her inheritance by her half-brother, Roderick. The codicil to her grandfather's will had been stolen, presumably by Roderick's best friend, and was reportedly hidden in a bawdy house. Though Annie was distracted by charming Richard Tregerran, who seemed to appear everywhere she went, she was determined to find that codicil. Regency Romance by Sandra Heath; originally published by Signet

The mid-1990s saw an exciting convergence of a number of different information protection technologies, whose theme was the hiding (as opposed to encryption) of information. Copyright marking schemes are about hiding either copyright notices or individual serial numbers imperceptibly in digital audio and video, as a component in intellectual property protection systems; anonymous communication is another area of rapid growth, with people designing systems for electronic cash, digital elections, and privacy in mobile communications; security researchers are also interested in 'stray' communication channels, such as those which arise via shared resources in operating systems or the physical leakage of information through radio frequency emissions; and finally, many workers in these fields drew inspiration from 'classical' hidden communication methods such as steganography and spread-spectrum radio. The first international workshop on this new emergent discipline of information hiding was organised by Ross Anderson and held at the Isaac Newton Institute, Cambridge, from the 30th May to the 1st June 1996, and was judged by attendees to be a successful and significant event. In addition to a number of research papers, we had invited talks from David Kahn on the history of steganography and from Gus Simmons on the history of subliminal channels. We also had a number of discussion sessions, culminating in a series of votes on common terms and definitions. These papers and talks, together with minutes of the discussion, can be found in the proceedings, which are published in this series as Volume 1174.

Wilkie Collins was an English novelist, playwright, and short story writer. Hide and Seek is the story about the girl named Mary - they called her Madonna, and she was deaf and dumb and beautiful as a painting by Raphael. All they did know about her identity was that she'd lost her hearing in an accident, and the proprietor of the circus had treated her horribly, and in her cache of secret personal private things, she owned one thing as precious to her as life itself: a bracelet made of brown human hair with the initials MG tied into it.

One by one, they brushed the opening of the tent to the side and walked out. As each one stepped outside the tent opening, they stopped, causing the person behind them to almost stumble. All at once, the sky and the air around them burst into a rainbow of colors. Greg's heart began to race, and he spun around, saying, 'What's going on?' He stood there looking around. 'What's happening?' Nobody could answer. Nobody knew. They stood there staring at the sky and the world around them. The crystal colors fell on them like raindrops. The wind came up suddenly and blew the dust around them as they shielded their eyes and then closed them tight. The next thing they knew, when they opened them up, they were in a garden. A magic paradise only for children. Secret missions from God. A child destined to be a prophet. Seven children are called into the magical Garden of Yahweh and sent on assignments, determined by The Color of Angels. Each of their meetings end with an important mission assigned by God. Tasks may involve love, hate, battles, death, peace, war, dreams, and new life. But above all, faith in God. The Color of Angels chronicles the developing relationships of these amazing children while exploring the remarkable impact their gifts from God have on the people they touch along the way and the unlikely ways their lives become intertwined.

Controversial yet beloved among audiences, Christmas-themed horror movies emerged in the early 1970s and gained a notorious reputation with Silent Night, Deadly Night (1984), depicting Santa as an ax-wielding maniac. Some parents and conservative groups condemned the film, while others embraced the portrayal of Yuletide as a backdrop for fear and dread. Drawing on interviews with directors, producers, special effects artists, photographers and actors, this book celebrates the sordid, colorful history of the Christmas horror subgenre. Psycho Santa films such as Christmas Evil (1980) and 3615 Code Pere Noel (1989) are examined, along with "Yule-Die" slashers like The Dorm that Dripped Blood (1982), Black Christmas (1974) and Silent Night, Bloody Night (1972). Commercial successes like Gremlins (1984) and Rare Exports: A Christmas Tale (2010) are covered, as well as more recent releases such as Better Watch Out (2016), Red Christmas (2016) and Deathcember (2019). Rare photographs, promotional materials and an annotated filmography are provided.

As children grow up learning how to play the game called "hide and seek," we as adults tend to replicate this childhood game into our daily walk with God. We hide behind things that we think are protecting us, keeping us from further rejection and pain; the fear that we have dealt with for years seems to keep crippling us. What we don't understand is that the longer we continue to play this game of "hide and seek," we are hindering ourselves from the destiny that God has ordained for our lives since the moment we took our first breath!

Young children learn about colors, numbers, and a variety of animals as they search each two-page spread for a little chameleon who loves to play hide-and-seek with his mother.

If it's Purple, Someone's Gonna Die is a must-read book for all film students, film professionals, and others interested in filmmaking. This enlightening book guides filmmakers toward making the right color selections for their films, and helps movie buffs understand why they feel the way they do while watching movies that incorporate certain colors. Guided by her twenty-five years of research on the effects of color on behavior, Bellantoni has grouped more than 60 films under the spheres of influence of six major colors, each of which triggers very specific emotional states. For example, the author explains that films with a dominant red influence have themes and characters that are powerful, lusty, defiant, anxious, angry, or romantic and discusses specific films as examples. She explores each film, describing how, why, and where a color influences emotions, both in the characters on screen and in the audience. Each color section begins with an illustrated Home Page that includes examples, anecdotes, and tips for using or avoiding that particular color. Conversations with the author's colleagues-- including award-winning production designers Henry Bumstead (Unforgiven) and Wynn Thomas (Malcolm X) and renowned cinematographers Roger Deakins (The Shawshank Redemption) and Edward Lachman (Far From Heaven)--reveal how color is often used to communicate what is not said. Bellantoni uses her research and experience to demonstrate how powerful color can be and to increase readers awareness of the colors around us and how they make us feel, act, and react. *Learn how your choice of color can influence an audience's moods, attitudes, reactions, and interpretations of your movie's plot *See your favorite films in a new light as the author points out important uses of color, both instinctive and intentional *Learn how to make good color choices, in your film and in your world.
