Audio Connections With the audio versatility of your HDTV, you can choose various connection options depending on the type and quality of sound that you want. From good to best sound, choose one of the options or refer to the user's manual of each component that you are connecting to get the best results.

Audio inputs and outputs can also be set in this tab. Voltage will typically default to built-in system audio outputs, but clicking the pop-up window will display all other available audio hardware. The audio input can also be set here, but it's not necessary unless you intend to use Voltage's audio in jacks to process external audio (more on this in the I/O Panel section).

Millennia recognise this issue and in the HV37 user guide they state that there is a "high gain jump near full clockwise for low-level signals". In practice, I didn't find the gain control to be excessively bunched at the high end, and it remained reasonably controllable throughout.
