Sample Negative Recommendation Letter - A negative or bad reference letter is usually written in a professional recommendation format. It usually is an extreme step and should be used sparingly in rare cases. Rather than write someone a negative reference letter, it would be wise to just turn down the request for writing the letter in the first place.

This letter should express appreciation for the sender's initiative, interest, and constructive criticism. Avoid being defensive. Keeping the tone positive will encourage honest input in the future. If you disagree with the negative feedback, you can still keep the tone positive by not arguing in the letter, but not agreeing, either.
