The big trick to coloring gifs is: try to achieve the coloring you want using as few layers as possible. The more layers you have, the bigger your file size. The second thing is that most of the frames should have a similar coloring to achieve a smaller size, since to reduce the size you have to reduce the number of colors displayed in the image.

This coloring works for most images. Once you have used Topaz on your image, you will need to color it. 1. Duplicate your base and set it to Soft Light, 100%. This darkens the image and adds contrast. But now it's a little too dark for a good coloring and yellow/orange. 2. Duplicate the base again, drag to the top, and set to Luminosity, 100%. This is just to add most of the natural color back to the image, while also keeping the contrast and making it slightly more matte.
