Poochytown is a course correction where Woodring removes the unnecessary character from the narrative and lets the Unifactor tell the story rather than the cartoonist forcing it into an artificial and false narrative. So if Woodring is trying to find the story that the Unifactor wants to tell, the story he discovers is one of trial and error.

Poochytown takes readers to the distant crumbling edge of the Unifactor, where the landscape's mind is either unfettered or unhinged, depending on your particular taste for mischief.

Old Town Hot Springs in downtown Steamboat Springs, Colorado provides natural hot springs, a full-service gym and fitness center, climbing wall, group exercise classes, and massage to members and guests.

I come away from this latest effort more convinced than ever that we all live in Poochytown — but it takes a genius like Woodring to show it to us.” - Jonathan Lethem, Motherless Brooklyn, Fortress of Solitude, Chronic City “Woodring is all about sweeping you up — and sweeping you away.

Jim Woodring. 18K likes. American philosophaster. Here is, oh, maybe five months' work... 25 pages. Outside the world has risen, bloomed and writhed, but Your Uncle Jim has remained steadfastly at the helm of this difficult, sinister story.

POOCHYTOWN MILESTONE: THE BED OF UNREASON The frightening story-in-progress POOCHYTOWN recently attained an apogee of sorts. Unfortunately, since the contents of the story are unknown and as yet unknowable, the circumstances which have led to this situation must remain a secret. If this rankles, I sincerely apologize.
