Project Initiation Document Pid Wales Project Initiation Documentation :: PRINCE2® wiki

The project management methodology that your organisation uses and the size of your project will determine whether you need a project initiation document (PID) as well as a project charter or project brief. They are similar documents in terms of scope but a PID contains more detailed information.

Project initiation document The Project Initiation Document (PID) is submitted for approval at Gateway 3: Delivery Proposal. The PID, in conjunction with supporting Benefits Management Plan, Communications Plan and Quality Plan gives the definition, direction and scope of the project.

Downloadable Template. The purpose of the Project Initiation Documentation (PID) is to define the project in detail so it can be used by the Project Board to assess the project and see how it performed. The Project Initiation Documentation gives the direction and scope (Project Plan) of the project and along with the Stage Plan forms the 'contract' between the Project Manager and the Project Board .

The Project Initiation Document (PID) is the first basic step to ensure your project sets off on the right foot. It sets the tone, context, expectations, and constraints. The PID specifically is derived from the Prince2 methodology, but generally all methodologies have artifacts that outline the project start. Project Initiation Documents are sometimes also called Project Charters or Project Brief.
