Essential oils are the highly concentrated version of the natural oils in plants. Getting essential oils from plants is done with a process called distillation, most commonly distillation by steam or water, where many parts of the plants are being used, including the plant roots, leaves, stems, flowers, or bark. After distillation, the outcome is a highly concentrated portion of essential oil, which will have the characteristic fragrance and properties of the plant from which it was extracted, and contain the true essence of the plant it came from. This includes the smell, but also the plant's healing properties and other plant characteristics. You can see how this highly potent extract of a plant or herb can be extremely useful for many purposes. Essential oils have been used throughout history in many cultures for their medicinal and therapeutic benefits. "I believe that for every illness or ailment known to man, that God has a plant out here that will heal it. We just need to keep discovering the properties for natural healing." — Vannoy Gentles Fite The aim of this guide is to provide a quick reference to the most common essential oils, giving its readers better access to information on the move.
