The Flying Sorcerers is a comedic science fiction novel by Larry Niven and David Gerrold, published in 1971. It tells the story of a human astronaut stranded on an alien planet, who is perceived as a magician by the native inhabitants due to his technology.

Flying is another dimension to magic that instills Harry with a sense of belonging. His natural talent demonstrates to him that he's meant to be at the school learning magic, quelling his previous anxieties about being behind all of his classmates in everything.

The Flying Sorcerer What was I doing in 1972 apart from wondering if it was possible to book a weekend on The Moon sometime? Essentially work, family and a very limited range of other things although a holiday by Biarritz was managed.

The Flying Sorcerers is the story of two sorcerers or one sorcerer and one hapless human, depending upon your point of view. A researcher from Earth visits a primitive planet and gets stranded. He is determined to get back to his ship and go home, that is if Shoogar, doesn't kill him first.

The main reason for me was the imbalance between mouse players and joystick players, putting joystick players at an unfair disadvantage, where mouse users have the computer doing most of the flying for them, not being hampered by damage (until completely destroyed), canon recoil, and generally having a much easier time aiming.
