Azuba lives in a small port on the east coast of Canada, and longs to be the kind of sea-captain's wife who travels with her husband, rather than a woman who sits at home in a dull, s Beth Powning's novel tells of a woman's life at sea in a very different time - the 1860s - when, as my husband has often remarked, 'Ships were made of wood and men were made of steel.'

The Captain's Wife - Wikipedia

The Captain's Wife is a public house in the former fishing hamlet of Swanbridge in Sully, between Barry and Penarth, Vale of Glamorgan, south Wales. The pub was established in 1977 from a row of three sea houses. Notable smuggling operations and dove culling once took place here and a tunnel connected the sea to what was known as Sully House. It takes its name from the wife of a sea captain who lived here and buried her in a nearby wood rather than confessing to her dying aboard his ship. The bo

The Captain's Wife was originally Sully House, a house originally owned by a captain. Legend has it that when his wife died, her body was kept in a box that was mistaken for treasure and stolen. A small fleet of fishing vessels were located at Swanbridge harbour and it is likely that that the row of cottages, that became the pub, were later the traditional homes of the local fishermen and their families.
