World religions is a category used in the study of religion to demarcate the five—and in some cases six—largest and most internationally widespread religious movements. Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Hinduism, and Buddhism are always included in the list, being known as the "Big Five". Some scholars also include another religion, such as Taoism, Sikhism, Zoroastrianism, or the Bahá'í Faith, in the category. These are often juxtaposed against other categories, such as "indigenous ...

The world's major religions (Hinduism, New Age Spirituality, Buddhism, Islam, Christianity) are also quite unique in their requirements. Most of the world religions place an individual on their own, striving for spiritual perfection. In Hinduism a person is on their own trying to gain release from karma.

Hinduism, major world religion originating on the Indian subcontinent and comprising several and varied systems of philosophy, belief, and ritual. Although the name Hinduism is relatively new, having been coined by British writers in the first decades of the 19th century, it refers to a rich cumulative tradition of texts and practices, some of which date to the 2nd millennium bce or possibly earlier.

Hinduism. While Hindus are trying to achieve Moksha (enlightenment) just as much as the Buddhists try to achieve Nirvana, there is not as much emphasis on individual suffering or rejecting the world. In order to achieve Moksha, one must understand the supreme reality in the world. There are different ways to do this, unlike in Buddhism where there is only one way.

Hindu belief in reincarnation forms the basis of religious practice and faith. Unlike the Buddhist concept of nirvana, the Hindu notion is one of attained deliverance. Hindu dogma teaches that the soul can be released from the wheel of life only by the observance of dharma -- doing one's duty according to one's position in life.
