summit at 11 am on monday september 18 this is the premise of james ka smiths book you are what you love the spiritual power of habit as

1. "'You are what you think ' is a motto that reduces human beings to brains-on-a--stick" (p3). That's why we experience a gap between what we know and what we do (p5). 2. Instead, we need to start from the conviction that human beings are first and foremost lovers, defined not by what we know but by what we desire (p7). That is, "you are what you love" (p9). 3.

At several junctures in You Are What You Love, Smith articulates what sounds very like the Ben Op, but with a deliberate emphasis on hope. As Smith noted in his recent conversation about the Ben Op, one of the things he's learned from Charles Taylor is that hope should be our "dominant posture." (As a side note, I think Dreher would say that the Ben Op is a hopeful posture, but that's certainly a contested point.)

You are what you love. But you might not love what you think. In this book, award-winning author James K. A. Smith shows that who and what we worship fundamentally shape our hearts. And while we desire to shape culture, we are not often aware of how culture shapes us.

--John Wilson, editor, Books & Culture "Informed by the insights of St. Augustine, You Are What You Love explores the substance of Christian discipleship as total life transformation through worship and liturgy. More than any other contemporary writer, Smith has helped me to understand how belief is embodied in us primarily through our habits of desire, and that God himself is the true satisfaction of our hungry hearts.

For the sake of discussion, let's refer to these three aspects of love as (1) Absolute Love, or the Great Love, which Ramakrishna, Rumi, and the teachers of the bhakti yoga and nondualist Tantra traditions tell us is ever-present, impersonal, and the very underpinning of the universe; (2) our individual experience of love, which is quirky, personal, and usually directed at something or someone; and (3) love as sadhana (practice).

He does this in his Cultural Liturgies project, and in his most recent book, You Are What You Love: The Spiritual Power of Habit (Brazos Press, 2016), the popular level version of Desiring the Kingdom (Baker Academic, 2009). Here Smith challenges the long-standing modernist assumption that human beings are thinking-things, which has lured the church to approach discipleship primarily as an intellect-shaping project, without being attune to the affective forces that shape our identity. What you are in love with, what seizes your imagination, will affect everything. It will decide what will get you out of bed in the morning, what you will do with your evenings, how you will spend your weekends, what you read, who you know, what breaks your heart, and what amazes you with joy and gratitude.
